

Martina Stone McGaw

Martina Stone McGaw is an Executive Coach and consultant with 10+ years experience in coaching, leadership development, and project design and execution with Fortune 500 companies. Through her career, Martina has led the Executive Education team at USC's Center for Effective Organizations in the Marshall School of Business and led strategy and team effectiveness for businesses internally.

Martina currently spends much of her time coaching individual leaders and teams towards greater effectiveness immediately and in future roles. Martina tailors her work to uncover the most critical and valuable aspects of each individual or team, as well as roadblocks and blind spots, allowing them to make the biggest impact on their organization and their lives. Working with leaders and teams at all levels in an organization, who are critical to lasting organizational change, is especially rewarding for Martina.

Martina is a focused and energized coach and consultant who is inspired by her work to see value added and progress made by each individual and business she works with. She has extensive experience leading and navigating project teams and working with complex groups of stakeholders. Martina's career has been a succession of successful and collaborative partnerships that have led to each elevated role in her career.

Martina has a Bachelor of Science from Purdue University and Master of Science in Human Resource Management from USC.

In her free time, Martina enjoys traveling, cooking, and reading when home in Los Angeles. Martina also competes with a barbershop-style chorus based in Santa Monica, California.
